I don't have many photos of my dad, but this one is perfect as he loved his motorcycles! He also loved working on cars, shooting guns, history and the Washington Redskins! He taught me how to ride a bike and skateboard. He put me to work reloading bullets for our shooting sessions. I've been to countless quarries and gun shows! He taught me the value of doing the right thing and being honest. He was tortured by Alzheimer's disease and I fully believe he is now at piece. I was always a daddy's girl and these past few years have been challenging to have a relationship with him, but at the end of the day, he is my dad. I know he loved my brother and I and now he's watching over us, continuing to guide us and is omnipresent with us.
I love you dad ❤️
