“ Although we have had our differences and other things starting out. I still remember him as a great father figure when I was growing up. He wasn't a part of my life in my teens or really adult hood. But he remained a father to my brother and sister. And for that I am thankful. Life takes us many different roads. All roads will take us to our destinations. Through road blocks, forks and traffic jams. We all have our place. He now gets to play his part as a watcher. Watching over his family and being with the ones that went before him and waiting to welcome those who come after. I wish to remember all the great things he has done for me and the lessons I learned. Thank you Harry. For being there as I was learning wright from wrong and such things in my early years. You helped build me as a person and as an adult. God bless you and I to will see you when that time comes as I make my destination. And may you bless all those that miss and love you.
