“ As a colleague of Bob at Blackburn, I recall his calm and intelligent comments during faculty discussions. Bob encouraged communication between different disciplines, so I often brought literature and writing classes to gallery exhibits. He always welcomed our visits and took time to read students' reactions to the sculptures, drawings, and creative installations.

“ In 2003-04 I was finishing my Bachelor’s degree at Blackburn and having struggled with some of the accreditation of my transcripts I found I was short on credits. I was now “forced” to take more classes so I thought some art classes... I had no real interest in art but thought an appreciation class would help fill the gaps...little did I know that it would do more than just provide college credits...

The Professor was newly hired and trying to navigate his new position and he was my age...and I was trying to get my degree finished...over the course of three and a half years he and I became very good friends...he and I had some deep conversations about life, Salvador Dali, various beliefs, Michelangelo, Family, Death, color wheels, photography, pottery and so much more...including when he was contemplating asking Angela his now wife to marry him...

Because of Bob I even taught a pottery class at St. Isidore and had Bob come show the class his pottery abilities. Bob had so many talents and such a huge view of the Arts...I ended up taking 5 more classes from him that included 2 pottery classes, a painting class and 2 Drawing classes....and even took his classes after I graduated..I gained so much knowledge from him...I never would have expected that from what began as one art class would have provided me with so much more than 3 credits... I developed a genuine and sincere admiration for art. I am truly thankful for Bob, had it not been for him, the way he encouraged me to finish my degree...had it not been for him I am not sure I would have finished my degree.

I am sure that our sunset are going to have a little more color... Thank you Bob for sharing your thoughts and talents and your insights with me and so many others.

Note: The photo of the jug on the shelf is one that he made and sits in our home... he gave me that when I graduated and I will continue to cherish it

Dan, you and I were in the same class for two years. I too remember him being a newly employed Art director. I envied him and envied his desire. I didn't fully realize how talented I was (and that's hard for me to say) until we were doing a nude, still-life with Amy Bachmans boyfriend at the time, and Bob came over to me and said "You understand the golden ratio don't you?" Without any knowledge of what he meant, I said yes. Later to find out I understood the correlation of Phi, or body composition. He could see that in me, when I didn't even see that in myself. I'm incredibly saddened to hear of his passing, and I'm not sure how he passed. I can only speculate that he passed of cancer, considering how this article read, but this brought me to my knees. What a legacy that has been lost. It sickens me that I didn't pursue something in this field, because I owe it to him to spread his legacy. Maybe some day. I feel for his parents and wife. What a traumatic loss. I will forever be changed by his words of wisdom, and his ungodly talent. Omg the talent! What an inspiration. Praying for everyone who had the pleasure to meet him and work with him and be inspired by him.

“ Bob and I went to grad school together. He was very talented. I was talking to one of my ceramics students yesterday about his work and did a search to find him and examples. I came upon this.... I'm very sorry for your loss Angela and family! May his memory be a blessing!

“Grit and grog! Work ethic and living one's passion. Pushing through physical pain til the work is done. Hard to write about someone who is the voice in your head every time you create art or stack wood. Bob you've sculpted a world you now have left behind. A sacred number of us who toil with silently working in paint, clay and pencil and when we want to stop we think of your hilarious stories or your inspirational spiritual teachings. You'll be there when we wonder if our art is trite or if we've stayed up long enough tending the fire. You'll be there when we step outside of our studios to look up at the sky and walk back in to continue working. You're there when I can't mix a color right, asking me what is missing. Humbling me like when you told me Michelangelo had already painted the Sistine Chapel at my age. Angela, I send you so much love. I have a feeling your love is what changed the sculptor more than anything he ever made.

“Bob was a dear colleague and friend. I will always cherish the memories of our work together and the countless hours we spent in animated discussion of just about every topic that came to mind. He was an immensely talented, dedicated man of endless intellectual curiosity. I know that he is at rest and beyond all pain, but find myself thinking of Plato's words at the death of his friend Socrates - "I covered my face and wept, not for him, but at the thought of my own calamity in having to part from such a friend.”

Condolences and sympathy to Angela and all of Bob's family. He was a wonderful and unique presence in the world and will be missed so very much.

“ Bob is one of the pillars of my memories of my education at Blackburn College. I was honored to consider him not just a professor, and mentor in The Arts, but also a friend. I have indelible memories of kiln builds and firings that went well into the early morning hours, watching him in sheer awe work on 5+ foot beautiful wheel-thrown vases, and sometimes working right at his side on an adjacent wheel while we listened to Beethoven or Led Zeppelin - just a couple dudes with blobs of mud between our hands and meandering conversation.

Angela, you have all my best thoughts and energy as I know how much he cherished not just your love, but your partnership as well.

“ Dear Angela and family, I am so sadden to hear of Bob’s passing! I was honored to come visit and do a workshop at Blackburn and to meet you both. Bob was unique and special and will always be remembered for his exceptional teaching and his dedication to his students. My niece Alina was one of his students. Her funny story is that she kept telling Bob that her Aunt did ceramics and Bob would always answer “ oh that nice”! She finally brought a ceramic text book in and said this is my Aunt and Bob said something to her like ,”holy this is your Aunt?” He contacted me and I came out and had a wonderful time with you and Bob and will always remember your kindness and caring! Sending love and condolences to you and the family. Marilyn Lysohir

“ I took an oil painting class with him spring semester 2018 at Blackburn. I learned so much about using oil paints as a medium in way that has left a lasting impact on my artistic side. I feel priviledged to have had the opportunity to take his class and I wish I could’ve taken more. My deepest sympathies to all 🎨❤️ .

“ My condolences to Angela and family. I had the pleasure of having Bob as a professor all 4 of my undergrad years at Blackburn College, as well as working for him as a student worker in Art Department. I have such a passion and appreciation for art due to all he taught us as students. Always made time to sit and talk with students and shared many stories. Blackburn College Art Department and his former students will forever be grateful for his dedication, knowledge and love for art. Gone but never forgotten.

“ Bob was such an amazing artist and person! I am so saddened to hear of his death and offer my deepest condolences to Angela and his family. Bob had such a big heart! I visited his classes often over the years at Blackburn as a visiting artist and he was so gracious. He was so supportive of all our area artists. I know his students adored him. This is such a loss for our whole community. With sympathy, Christine llewski Huelsmann

“ Bob and I first crossed paths during our art classes at SMSU in the mid-1980s. At that time, I was pursuing a BFA in drawing and graphic design, and Bob's exceptional talent in pottery left a lasting impression on me. Beyond his artistic skills, his soft-spoken demeanor and sharp wit quickly created an enduring friendship between us.

During those days, we spent a lot of time together, sharing laughter and creating memories. However, as life unfolded, we lost touch after college.

It wasn't until about 10 years ago that we reconnected through social media—a surprising turn of events considering his feelings toward social media 😞.

I always looked forward to our monthly phone calls where we discussed a variety of topics. His intelligence, thoughtfulness, and wisdom beyond his years always impressed me.

In 2022, Bob and Angela visited Springfield, providing us with the opportunity to meet Angela and spend a memorable evening together. During that time, we reminisced and laughed for hours.

I had been looking forward to our monthly check-in over the last week, hoping to chat with Bob, but unfortunately, I missed that opportunity. The news of his passing saddens me, but I am grateful for our friendship and the memories that will stay with me forever.

Bob was one of a kind and he will be greatly missed. — Dan and Linda Stewart

“ I met Bob in art class at SMSU in Springfield, MO in the 1980's. We'd often ride together between St. Louis and Springfield and enjoyed long conversations about art, design, music and how we would've been friends had we met as young boys. His amazing talent, incredible work ethic and kindness continue to inspire me. Rest in peace, dear friend. Peace and love to Bob's family.

“ My husband Jon and I will always love Bob! He brought so much talent, humor, and laughter to our pottery studio! He worked with us for several years, beginning in the late 1990's. We will never forget his hilarious stories, or his incredible skills as an artist. We called him Michelangelo, because, yes, he was that good! The indelible memories that he left with all who knew him are a lasting legacy, as are the exquisite masterpieces that he created during his time on this earth. We will forever be blessed by the many wonderful moments we shared over these long years!
